2011 – 2012

THE CITY OF CALGARY
COMMUNITY &
NEIGHBOURHOOD SERVICES

This booklet is a publication of The City of Calgary, Community & Neighbourhood Services.

The Guide is not a full list of all services available to Calgary's First Nations, Métis and Inuit peoples. Additional information is available at www.informcalgary.ca, a public website of community, government, health and social services. This online database is a partnership between Alberta Health Services and The City of Calgary. If you cannot find what you are looking for or don't have access to a computer, call the 24-hour 2-1-1 telephone service and speak with their expert referral specialists.

The listing of an agency in this Guide does not indicate endorsement, nor does the exclusion of an organization imply lack of approval.

The information in the Calgary Aboriginal Services Guide is alphabetically organized by the organization's name. Service information, locations and contact information is provided underneath the name. Additional information is found at the end of the Guide.

The City of Calgary assumes no responsibility to any person or persons for the information contained in this publication, nor shall it be held liable for any damage caused to any person, whether negligently or otherwise.

This guide was funded by The City of Calgary, Community & Neighbourhood Services.

For additional copies of the Aboriginal Services Guide or to request an organization listing, please call 3-1-1.

All Calgarians of First Nations, Inuit or Métis descent are an important part of our great city's identity. In fact, Calgary's diverse population, made of residents from all nations, is something that adds to the energy and success of the city.

The City of Calgary recognizes the needs of the Métis community and First Peoples living here and provides some direct services to these citizens. We also partner with other agencies and governments to make additional services available. This Guide has been compiled to promote the variety of helpful groups and programs available in Calgary.

May the information in this guide help you on your journey!

Sincerely,

Mayor Naheed K. Nenshi
The City of Calgary
